R.C. School District trustees oppose justice center

By DINAH ROSE

Staff Writer Cucamonga School District trustees joined a growing list of West End agencies opposing the construction of a regional law and justice center adjacent to the Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park.

The board has voted unanimously to urge the County Board of Supervisors to consider alternate locations for the proposed center.

The Central School District passed a similar resolution in July, and Alta Loma School District trustees are expected to address the issue at their September

A two-page resolution passed by the Cucamonga board cited the importance of the regional park as a recreational area, and its use in preventing problems such as juvenile delinquency through offering an

Trustee Manual Luna voiced support for expanding the park as a family area, rather than building the multistory complex.

The high-rise was considered inconsistent with the neighboring park, and a section of the resolution rapped the possibility of the facility bringing "the criminal element and their associates" to the park area.

Superintendent Chris Arce said he was disturbed by the county's failure to contact local agencies regarding the

"I didn't know about their serious intent to follow through with the project until a month ago," he said this morning. "Personally, I would like to see the regional park expand and develop some educational areas, such as nature study

"We could take the children there instead of busing them to the mountains and desert to learn about flora and fauna of the area.'

Rancho Cucamonga Councilman Mike Palombo attended the meeting, and told board members of various land parcels that had been offered to the county by developers for the project.

The land apparently was not acceptable, and the county purchased 17 acres at the corner of Fourth Street and Archibald Avenue, adjacent to the park Ontario Mayor Robert Ellingwood has also opposed the plan, and Rancho Cucamonga council members are waiting to determine local reaction before taking a The new facilities would replace the current law and justice center on Mountain Avenue in Ontario, which is considered inadequate for the area's needs.

The new center would house 21 courtrooms in a fivestory building, and offices in a smaller building. Additional concerns have involved the increased traffic that could be expected if the center were constructed, and the utilization of dwindling open space in the area. Palombo said county officials will meet with interested citizens Friday to discuss the project, and various county officials will address the Rancho Cucamonga City Council during the next few weeks.

In other action, the board tabled approval of two new positions within the district for an assistant superintendent of instruction and special programs, and job description for administrative assistant.

Arce said additional time was needed to incorporate the changes with the restructuring currently underway in the district.

Trustees, with Georgia Griffin and David Hernandez absent, also increased the daily salary for substitute teachers to $40, effective Sept. 1.

Drive-through proposal source of heated debate

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Drive-through facilities for the McDonald's restaurant on Foothill Boulevard in Upland were approved in a suspense-filled session of the City Council Monday

The motion passed on a 3-2 vote, after council members heard from disgruntled neighbors and a public relations consultant hired by the restaurant. Mayor John McCarthy and Councilman Frank Carpenter opposed the drive-through facility, agreeing with residents that the addition would be detrimental to the neighborhood.

The city could not ask for a better business neighbor than McDonald's," said Carpenter, 'however, it was designed as a sitdown restaurant. (The drivethrough) is just too much for too

Hugh "Larry" Lawrence will begin as principal of Magnolia School in Upland this September. Lawrence, currently the director of educational services at Antioch Unified School District, was selected from nearly 80 candidates who applied for the post. He earned a doctorate in education from the University of California, Los Angeles, in 1975 and a master's in mathematics and science from Columbia University in 1959.

Other council members disagreed, citing the numerous compromises the restaurant has made in the past to comply with city regulations

When it was built in 1968, it was one of the first McDonald's in the country to avoid using the firm's distinctive golden arches, and it used an architectural style that blended with the surrounding neighborhood.

"If we don't approve this," said Councilwoman Ina Petokas, "then there will probably be no improvements made to the property at all.

In addition to the drive-through facilities, the firm is also planning to install a block wall to shield residents from the drive-through lane, and extensive landscaping to serve as a visual screen. Other proposed modification to the original facility included moving the drive-through lane closer to the restaurant and away from the parking lot border.

A sophisticated speaker system will be installed, that automatically adjusts the voice level to roughly 10 decibels above the surrounding

In addition to controlling the amount of noise produced, the speakers will also be repositioned to the north, away from neighboring residences

Bill Jochimsen, one of the residents who lives closest to the restaurant, cited the "carnivallike" atmosphere the new facilities would encourage.

'Already we have Ronald McDonald and the Hamburgler," he told the council. "This will only make the situation worse.

Joe Laponis, another neighbor, reminded the council of the firm's assurance for a family type restaurant when it was first built.

'Look at the other drive-throughs in the area," he said. "See the kind of people they attract. And by approving this, the council would be setting a precedent to allow similar drive-throughs around the city.

The council agreed with a commission planning recommendation to approve the change. Commissioners also passed the motion on a 3-2 vote, with two commissioners absent

High school board voices 'reservations' on center

Another school board was added to the list of those who oppose the proposed location of a law and justice center Monday night as the Chaffey Joint Union High School District expressed "serious reservations" with the plan.

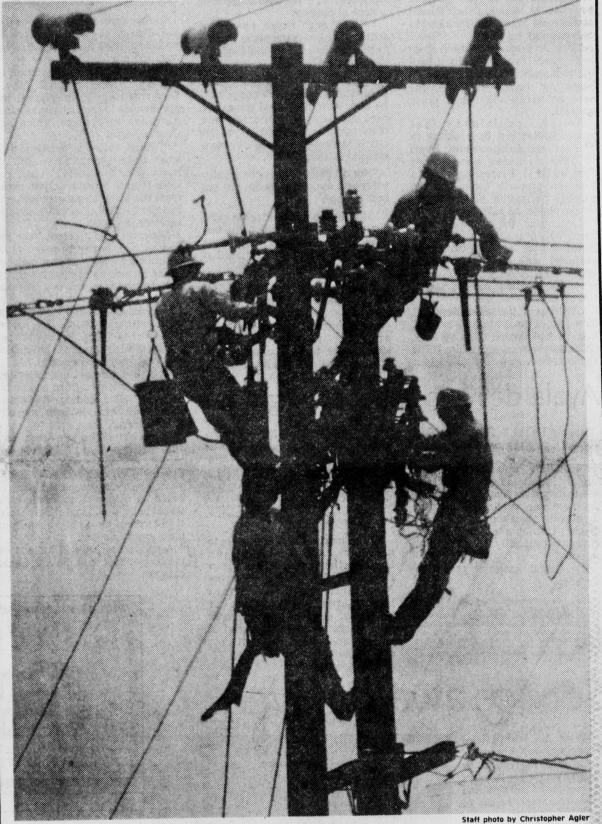

Trustees were unanimous in their opposition to the county's proposal to build the center on property immediately north of Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park in Ontario.

Central and Cucamonga school districts in Rancho Cucamonga have already voiced opposition to the plan which would place the multi-storied building on 17 acres of land at Archibald Avenue and Fourth Street. Other districts and the Rancho Cucamonga City Council are expected to deal with the issue later this month

The item was placed on Monday's agenda by Chaffey trustee Martha Chapman who said the land should be developed for recreational pur-

She asked that the board approve a resolution similar to that adopted by Central School District trustees -a resolution that included a list of reasons why the center should not be built on the property.

The county hopes to build the center to replace its current court facility at Mountain Avenue and Sixth Street in Ontario. Conditions at the center are described as overcrowded and there is little doubt among local officials that a new center in the West End is needed.

There's not much room left at the top in this high wire act as Southern California Edison linemen work to relocate lines to another pole in Upland. The work was done in preparation for street widening to take place near the intersection of Foothill Boulevard and Mountain Avenue.

Upland trustees approve budget

Upland School District trustees agreed to an additional $47,463 in expenditures for the 1980-1981 publication budget last week, following suggestions made at a special hearing.

The $12,536,165 publication budget was approved unanimously by the board, with members Rick Minnis and Dale Andersen absent.

Most of the additional money was allocated to improvements including $20,000 for air conditioning and $15,000 for carpeting.

District officials have been working during the past several years to install cooling systems in all existing buildings, and carpet classrooms. Trustees decided to step up the programs using reserve funds carried over from the previous school year.

Another $6,213 was allocated to the Gifted and Talented Education program (formally Mentally Gifted Minors) in various budget areas.

Trustees agreed to double the amount allocated for property appraisal, from $5,000 to $10,000. This money may not be needed depending on a pending decision by the Public Schools Insurance Authority.

Another $1,250 was budgeted to teacher travel and conference funding, raising the account to $3,750. Last year $2,207 was spend on mileage and conferences for regular teachers, and a total of $16,212 for all teachers and special programs. Trustees commended district staff on the way the budget has been handled. 'I see some compromises that make real sense," said Trustee Barry Brandt. "The district has been blessed with sound financial leadership during the last several years." roofing projects at Valencia and Pioneer Junior High School, and an $11,000 bid for painting at Baldy

Soccer field neighbors complain

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Neighbors of the six soccer fields at Upland's 11th Street Park find their frustration growing and their patience getting shorter with the new soccer season only a week

Residents met with American Youth Soccer Organization representatives and the Upland City Council in a special work session week, part of a long-term effort between the groups to rectify complaints of excessive noise, lighting and in one case, drastic drainage problems from the fields.

Homeowners from 11th Street, Waverly and Crofton courts berated the council with stories of damaged property, late-night and earlymorning practice sessions and glaring lights that spotlight their back yards and homes.

AYŠO representatives, in turn, told of their efforts to work with residents by limiting playing hours, attaching timing devices to the lights and working with city staff to correct the problems.

The playing fields are located on the north side of 11th Street, west of Silverwood Avenue. The land was originally intended for a junior high school, but when school district officials determined growth in the city was primarily to the north and the site would not be needed, they sold the property to the city.

with AYSO representatives who were to make the necessary grading changes and add plantings and lights to transform the vacant lot into six soccer fields. The city was to take over maintenance of the area July 1,

Part of the agreement was to provide a buffer zone between the fields and neighboring residents through landscaping. The youth group asked for additional time, and got a six-month extension. They planted $8,000 worth of bushes and trees earlier this year.

Now residents are concerned the two-foot-high plants will do nothing to shield them from the 2,000 children who use the fields, and have asked the city to build a block wall instead.

Sheila Mowll, who lives on 11th Street at the corner of the park, has a different and more pressing request. When the vacant lot was regrad-

ed, she found workers piling the dirt above the six-foot-high fence in her back yard. "When we first moved here in 1964, that vacant lot was level with the yard," she said. "If anything, it may have been a little lower. We never had any problems with drainage.

City workers did readjust the grading at the Mowll's request, adding a ditch and moving the 10-foot hill away from the back yard. This winter, however, the water coming from groves to the north and the fields themselves, spilled onto the Mowll's property, flooding a room addition they added last summer. Mrs. Mowll pulled out a couch from along the west wall.

'Look at the water marks,' she said, pointing to a wavering line in the paneling about six inches off the floor. "This room is only a year old, and already the resale value is down. We can't do anything to fix that.

Standing in her back vard, the soccer field is visible over her fence, and the light poles tower above the grass.

"We really don't have much problem with the noise," she said. "I guess we're enough lower it goes right over our heads. But the water is terrible.

City and AYSO officials agree with her, and the council gave the go-ahead in July to install a drainage system on the east side of the field.

Sprinklers have also been exchanged for a drip irrigation system in some areas to help avoid runoff of excessive water.

An earlier proposal to construct a wall on the edge of the playing fields, leaving an open corridor along the property line, was rejected by the council after complaints from residents. Jim Tranter, of Waverly Court, said the plan was "useless.

"It would only turn into a garbage dump," he told the council. "Kids would throw their trash back there and it would be a dump." He added it might be dangerous if children climbed to the top of the wall to watch the games, and instead suggested a 10 foot wall — two feet below the ground and eight feet above - to be constructed along the property line.

His neighbor Jerry Nerney agreed, stating that he was "sick and tired" of attending meetings for the past two years and still having to deal with the same problems.

The council requested city staff to research the best type of wall to use in the situation, and postponed making a decision until the study was completed. AYSO also presented an alternative plan for drainage to run east-west across the fields, which will be considered at the council's Sept. 2 meeting.

Jim Wilt, chairman of the field committee for AYSO, expressed his confidence the problems could be worked out.

"We've tried to comply with all their (the neighbors') complaints," he said. "We've spent about $175,000 on the fields so far — we want to do this right."

Baring 'naked' truth may turn into a nightmare

By ELAINE SMYTH

Copley News Service

The exhibitionist For most of society, he is the epitome of the "dirty old man" gone public. Harmless, maybe, but repugnant. In 1974 a nation of college students and some daring adults caricatured the exhibitionist by disrobing and "streaking" - on campuses and at sports events, at the Academy Awards ceremony and in St. Peter's Square in Recent published findings by 14 professionals from the United States and Canada reveal a darker side to the exhibitionist.

These professionals - psychologists, psychiatrists and attorneys - concluded that, while the exhibitionist is exhilarated during the act of exposing himself to a female victim, much of his life is a nightmare.

What if my wife finds out? What if my boss finds out?

What is the neighbors know?

These are frequent questions that race through the exhibitionist's mind, according to Dr. Daniel J. Cox, assistant professor in the department of behavioral medicine and psychiatry at the University of Virginia Medical School, Charlottesville, Va.

Cox is co-editor of "Exhibitionism: Description, Assessment and Treatment" (Garland STPM Press, New York) with Dr. Reid J. Daitzman of the Connecticut Center for Behavioral and Psychosomatic Medicine, New Haven.

The book is based on a study conducted by Cox and Elizabeth McMahon, also of the University of Virginia. From a sample of 1,000 women from across the nation, the recent study estimates that 40 million American women have been subjected to indecent exposure or 'flashing' by male exhibitionists.

Cox said the figure is "an underestimate because the average age of the women surveyed was 19. That's a very young sample. If you ask an older sample, the percentages increase.

Exhibitionism is the most common form of sexual deviation and yet very few seek treatment unless they are forced to by legal pressures — if someone turns them in and the police arrest them," said Cox in a telephone interview 'About one-third of all males arrested in the United States, Canada and Great Britain for sexual perversions are arrested for indecent exposure.

Cox said there are no data on whether it is on the increase, but the perversion has been documented since 4 He and the other book contributors estimated that 85 percent of the exposures are never reported to authorities The book focuses on research, clinical experiences in dealing with exhibitionism, legal implications and some effective methods of treatment.

A composite picture of the typical exhibitionist indicates he is between the ages of 21 and 45, usually white, typically middle class and a wage earner whose job ranges from policeman or nuclear engineer to a garbage collector. He is generally heterosexual. The most common characteristic is that he is socially isolated, Cox said. 'Even as children they engaged in a lot of isolated play. They tend to be the types who would rather go fishing by themselves than play basketbalk ... They don't typically allow themselves to get involved in social bonding or join a gang or a group," Cox said.

He said the exhibitionist usually doesn't degenerate to other perversions. They typically do not use exhibitionism as the route along the way to rape. The researchers define exhibitionism as "the expressed impulse to expose the male genitals to an unsuspecting female as a final act of sexual gratification. There is no single, simple reason why a man becomes an exhibitionist, he said. "But the range may be aggressive impulses against females to enjoying the fantasies of sexual gratification, although his real motive is not to make love to the victim.' Exhibitionists tend to seek areas with open spaces that will give them a ready escape route. Frequently, they expose themselve to a female while in their car. Cox said girls 10 to 16 years old most often are the victims.

Exhibitionists say they select younger women because they think there will be less chance that they will take legal action," he said. "They also think younger women will be more sexually aroused by it.

Exhibitionism can have its worst effects when the flasher is known by the victim. Thirty-six percent of the women surveyed said their single most traumatic exposure experience was when they knew the perpetrator.

Cox noted with irony that when women expose themselves men generally don't report it because they are more receptive to the act. 'If a woman does it, it is not considered perversion. There's a long history of striptease joints and the Playboy-type magazines. It's only been recently that men have gotten into this," he said. Cox, who has treated about 25 exhibitionists in the last five years, said their wives often express concern that they may molest the couple's children or ruin the family's reputation if the exhibitionist is arrested. The researchers also observed that during the act of exposure; the man becomes so obsessed with his fantasies of exposure and its impact on the victim that he frequently loses contact with reality And, although they deny the fact that they're an exhibitionist to themselves and others, they find it very painful when they are discovered.

"Because of their own denial, they generally will not seek professional help. And this is unfortunate because there are several techniques that can control the Research shows that traditional Freudian psychoanalysis has been ineffective.

"The psychoanalysis will help him understand why he does it, but because it is impulse behavior, impulse overrides the intellect.

Teachers, minorities attack new graduation rules

By ANTHONY PERRY Copiey News Service

The state's new high school graduation requirements are being attacked by teachers' unions and minority legislators as discriminatory - a year before any student has been denied a diploma.

Federally funded lawyers for poor people plan a lawsuit to overturn the new standards that beginning next June will require students to pass reading, writing and mathematics tests to graduate.

The state Department of Education estimates that 18,000 students — 8 percent of the class of 1981 — will fail the tests and says schools are not offering enough remedial classes

The department also predicted a much higher failure rate for minorities than for Anglos and said the proficiency testing program is hampered by parent apathy, student absenteeism, and untrained teachers. The result, a department report warned, could be increasing pressure on local school boards to lower

Despite the problems and opposition, Assemblyman Gary K. Hart, D - Santa Barbara, who sponsored the 1976 bill requiring the tests, says the new requirements will restore respect for the diploma and improve education by forcing teachers and administrators to work harder.

We have to stop the charade where school districts award diplomas to students who can't read or write or do simple math," Hart said. "We're already seeing some improvements as schools get more serious and spend more time on basics. We can't go back to the old - self congratulatory system where districts graduate illiterates."

The black and Chicago caucuses in the Legislature want to wait until the class of 1984 to require the tests. Assemblyman Peter Chacon, D-Coronado, and ther minority legislators say the tests hits unfairly at poor and minority students because the state has not done enough to help students with educational disadvantages.

Chacon, co-authour of the state's bilingual education law is also worried that Spanish-speaking students will be denied diplomas because the law requires the test be in English. The education department has notified school districts that while test questions must be in English, test directions can be in Spanish

The push for a three-year delay is backed by the California Teachers Association (CTA) and the California Federation of Teachers (CFT). CTA took no position on Hart's 1976 bill, but CFT was an enthusiastic supporter. Both groups now feel a delay is necessary because of Proposition 13.

"Schools lost a whole year of summer school because of Proposition 13," said CTA lobbyist Sharon Bowman, a former elementary schoolteacher in Escondido. "That had a terrible effect on marginal students. Many districts didn't really have their tests ready until last year. We think it's just unfair to push this fast. It will just mean more dropouts as students get discouraged.'

David W. Gordon, assistant chief of the education department's office of program evaluation and research, opposes a delay and says districts are as ready now as they would be in 1984.

"Most districts seem to have done a conscientious job of preparing tests and trying to get remedial help for failing students," Gordon said. "A few have had to be dragged kicking and screaming into the program. Our sense is that if we delayed for three years, these districts would just relax for two years or so until the pressure was on again. And other districts would probably lose

Minority legislators would like to win a three - year delay be amending a bill submitted by Hart to "clean up" parts of the proficiency program. The bill would require districts to set different standards for handicapped students and prohibit districts from giving certificates of completion to students who fail the graduation tests but pass their courses.

Hart's bill has been criticized by minority legislators for bestowing special consideration to the handicapped while prohibiting the certificates of completion which many minority students might seek. Hart called the certificates "a farce, a hoax" and said he fears districts would use them to avoid the time and effort to improve education for minority students.

If the delay movement dies, the proficiency program still faces a legal test by the federally funded California Rural Legal Assistance program. CRLA lawyers believe the law can be blocked much as a federal court blocked a similar testing program in Florida.

The CRLA — with 13 offices throughout the state — has done the research and is waiting for a client, a student denied a diploma because of the tests.

"The Florida judge said the testing was discriminatory because too little warning was given that students would be denied diplomas and because the state had not done enough to eliminate segregation.

'We think both factors are also true in California," said CRLA lawyer Ellen Peter. "Denial of the diploma, and the long - term economic and psychological stigma, is a serious thing.'

Despite the Florida ruling, which prohibits the state from using the test as a diploma requirement until 1983, Gordon is confident the California program can withstand legal challenge. He notes two major differences between the two states.

First, the entire Florida school system had been judged by the courts to be racially segregated and offering an inferior education to minorities, whereas segregation suits in California have dealt with individual districts in San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Pasadena and San Bernardino.

Second. Florida was using the same test statewide, while in California each district developed its own tests.

Although the CRLA disagrees, Gordon feels the lack of a statewide ruling on segregation and the use of local tests will make it impossible to block the California program with just one lawsuit.

Besides the legal and legislative challenges on the state level, the proficiency program also has problems at the local level. The education department in May released its second annual report on the program.

Foster child has need for loving home

TRUMAN Copley News Service

Jean is 20, a 3.6 grade point average student in her second year of college, petite, vivacious, and is going to be married this summer. In the premarital counseling, I was skeptical enough of her story that I took the time to check it out.

Jean was raised as a foster child the last 17 of her 20 years. The juvenile court removed her from the custody of her mother when they found that she and her sisters were beaten, malnourished and left chained to the plumbing under the kitchen sink for hours. She is crippled in both knees from being repeatedly slammed into the wall. Jean cannot kneel.

She has lived in seven foster homes, has attended 31 schools and lived in approximately 20 towns, all in the same country

Jean said she has eight brothers and 22 sisters, and has invited 10 persons to her wedding whom she refers to as "moms and dads.

Jean does not have any idea who her real father is, nor does her mother.

She pointed out that children do not have to be delinquent to be placed in foster homes, and gave examples of why a child might be placed in an out-of-home situation. She listed such things as severe marital discord in which the child suffers, or the family is broken by divorce, separation, or desertion and the remaining parent cannot care for the child. There are also the cases of abuse or neglect, where the family is a physical danger to the

Other children may have a severe emotional disturbance of some kind of behavior problem, most often meaning they are acting out their hostility or fears. All of the above need a home to go to, and loving hands to Jean noted that when youngsters are placed in a new environment, whether it is juvenile hall, a shelter care home, or a foster home, they should not be expected to immediately adapt or adjust, because what they have just gone through could have been very dramatic.

She says that foster parents should try to understand that much of the foster child's misbehavior is not because they are abnormal or a deviate, but because they may be angry or hurt by the recent separation from their natural parents or last foster parents. Many children believe they are being separated because they are bad and are being punished, she added.

Jean feels strongly that placement failures are the biggest problem in foster home care. This reinforces the feeling in the child that the child is bad and that no one wants them. After a few such experiences ending in failures, it becomes extremely hard for them to give trust or love to anyone. This is tragic when this is carried over into adult life, she observed.

Jean insisted that foster children are normal, and are only using the resources that they have gathered from their past experiences to guide them in their reactions. There are usually very good reasons why foster children J act differently in some situations.

She told me about the first home in which she stayed. The people had two of their own daughters and three foster daughters. She said that the foster children always ate their meals out on the porch on a picnic table, while the rest of the family ate in the dining room.

'My foster mother would go to the store and take her own children and grandchildren into the store and make us three sit out in the car. She would buy candy, Cokes, and buy us nothing. At Christmastime, we got one package while her own children and grandchildren got seven or eight presents each.

She went on, "You can see, being so young and being subjected to this kind of treatment for six years, caused me to think that all foster kids were different from normal kids and that all foster children were treated the same as we were.

Ordinary living is affected by space research

By REV. JOSEPH GUTHRIE

Montclair Ministerial Association We live in a day of space travel. We have sent men to the moon, and plans are underway to send astronauts to other planets and to establish space platforms. Often we hear people asking, "What has all that to do with me?"
"I'm just an ordinary person." "I will never travel in space." "Does all that have anything to do with me?"

Sometime ago I attended a meeting at which a representative of Rockwell Corporation, a major space company, shared with us some of the products now being made for the public that were developed first to be used in space efforts. It was very interesting to understand how much ordinary living is now affected by research and development in the space probes. Two things become apparent. We live better and we live longer because of the scientific achievements of the space program. These things effect every one of us in many ways. We should be grateful for these contributions.

I want to think with you about another "space-walk". This one involves One from "out there" who came "down here." He came to earth some nineteen hundred and fifty years ago. Sometimes people say, "What does His coming here have to do with me?" "I'm just an ordinary person." "I don't understand how God becoming flesh has anything to do with me." It does. Because Jesus Christ came to earth every person can live better and live longer. People who came into contact with Him here recognized a quality in His life. It was different and decidedly better than the current life style of His day. People gathered around Him to ask how they could live like He did. He told them He came to make that possible. Because of His victory over death He can share with us the values of His death and the power of His resurrection. The Apostle Paul wrote, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." That is adequacy for life! He also makes it possible to live longer. He said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." That not only deals with quality but with duration. To Lazarus' agitated sister Martha He said, "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." That is for eternal life.

These values are for all people. Jesus did not come to help an exclusive group. If you trust Him as Savior and Lord, you can take advantage of His "space-walk." You'll live better. You'll live longer.

Sophistication of skates grows

Copley News Service through a pile of skates on the floor, finally seizing a large black boot with yellow wheels

"This," he said, shaking the seven pounds of leather, metal and polyurethane, "is derfoot. worth two hundred bucks. Two hundred dollars for a pair of skates. Five years ago, people would have laughed at the idea. Now, they don't even blink an

Roller skates, once simple metal contraptions that clipped onto the bottoms of shoes, have become highly sophisticated and expensive toys. Aficionados mix and match from a confusing array of wheels, hardware and shoes to come up with their own custom models, knowing they must pay anywhere from $60 to $300 for state - of - the - art equipment. They do this willingly, eagerly.

'You should see them lined up here on the weekends," said Hamel, who opened his Mission Beach skate shop in San Diego just as roller fever hit three years ago.

'We've got three guys putting skates together, and there's no way we can keep up with the demand."

An informal survey of skate shops found that the skating boom is far from over. In fact, spring has brought customers in record numbers.

A pair of skates can be bought in department stores for as little as $25, but skate buffs turn up their noses at such equipment, dismissing it as inferior in performance and durability. As could be expected, skate merchants advised against buying mass - produced skates on the theory that any serious skater - out there for more than 10 hours a week - will end up spending a comparable amount of money on replacement parts.

For the occasional skater, department store equipment is no doubt acceptable, but if one decides to shop for custom skates, that first purchase can be a mind - boggling experience. Shoppers are confronted by components that vary tremendously in quality and price. To make the going a bit easier, here is a guide to the four most important parts of a roller skate.

Wheels: The new colorful polyurethane wheels, borrowed from the bottom of a skateboard nearly four years ago, have revolutionized the art of skating. Because they are lighter and more flexible than old - fashioned metal wheels, they can glide smoothly over rough outdoor surfaces. Wheels come in various widths and hardness, which is measured in durameters. and most skate shops will have at least 20 types of wheels to choose from. They can be had for as little as $2 a wheel or as much as $100 for a set of eight. Generally, the harder and smaller a wheel, the faster it will carry its skater. A soft, wide wheel will provide a stable, smooth ride and recommended for novice skaters. Very hard urethane wheels are used in indoor skating rinks while the softer polyurethane is used outdoors. Hamet developed a new type of wheel in the shape of a ball. dubbed "rollerball," which he claims is more maneuverable than a traditional wheel. Rollerballs are highly recommended for use in skateboard parks, but some skate shop owners are not entirely convinced they are suited for street riding. They sell for about $6 a way Jerome Prager is writing the biography of Carlo Grimaldi, writing it with chisels in rock - hard Alaskan yellow cedar.

It's part of his work as a revivalist, a lightning rod for a spark stalled for three centuries in the museums of Europe, a spark he hopes to project another 300 years into the future.

Barring fire or flood, that's how long this copy of the Grimaldi harpsichord nearing completion in his Laurel Canyon shop will last.

First it must be explained that by calling it a copy we're not suggesting that this, his 36th harpsichord, is some half - serious, gluestained showpiece.

This 8-foot 1-inch, 100string instrument, his 85pound angel's wing, is like nothing we've ever seen produced in our lifetimes.

Down to wood types and the direction of that wood's grain and the alloy of its metal, it is a perfect working re-creation. And his mimicry is so complete that he must play the instrument for months before he sells it, to figure out why the old masters, working through his hands, did what they

There is, he says, no other way to learn a dead art.

Of course, we may wonder why the 52-year-old craftsman does what he does. Spending three months of his life building unequaled replicas like this one and selling them for $6,-000, half the cost of a mass produced modern version of the same thing

Like his deciding he was a builder and not a player of harpsichords, and a builder rather than a producer of records - his former profession - he decided that this was what he was meant to do.

Some early architectural training would enable him to draw working models of the original instruments as they were disassembled and meticulously restored in European museum.

Musical training from age 5 helped him understand the playing of this instrument that is closer, because its levers pluck rather than strike its strings like a piano, to a lute, a guitar and a violin than anything else.

Then there was the woodworking learned from his father when he was growing up in the Canal Zone. Most of all, there's the money and the business acumen, learned in a successful record producing career, that allows him to charge so little and live so well this life that in pace very much resembles the 16th century life of craftsman Carlo Grimaldi.

Most of these talents lay dormant for years while he ran himself ragged in the music business. An angst producing life that couldn't be further removed from the musical world of Haydn and Mozart, when the harpsichord was king of concert instruments.

'At almost the instant I began in 1968 I realized that the nature of handcrafting put the brakes on the speed of my life.

Of course, there were other problems to overcome, the biggest being that there was no living person on the West End that could teach him how to build a harpsichord. So he took the only step open to him. he taught himself, a move that has benefits and drawbacks.

"If nobody could teach me, then nobody could teach me bad habits So I set out alone.

In 1972 he dropped out of the music business altogether and began taking orders for various size and shape harpsichords, all the originals.

ong

"Of course, I was also fortunate to be good enough at what I was doing to accept orders.'

So far his instruments are reviews from top musicians and music departments at University at Dominguez Hills, USC, UCLA and nearly every other major area institution.

Of note is his steadfast built in exact accordance to adherence to the original designs, designs he has authenticated with the few remaining European masters.

Of course, he also has a captive audience. If someone in Southern California wants a highgood enough to draw rave quality harpsichord they have to come to Prager because there is nobody places like California State else. In fact, he says there are only a handful of builders in the entire country, with most of them in the Midwest and East.

"What I'm doing here is trying to revive a dead art, and the only way to do that is to first learn how the old masters did it."

Though his work is mainly that of a copier, he is constantly amazed by the in the works. On the instrument's downfall, the the French Revolution quills provided enough undesign principles inherent

Antique buffs turn home into showcase

When Dawn Entner threw out her husband's prized Red Riding Hood glass, she learned her first lesson in the value of antiques

When John Entner, Upland dentist, married Dawn over five years ago, it took almost two years before Entner's love of antiques rubbed off on his wife.

"I was the chrome, glass and white chinchilla fur gal," Dawn laughed. "It was when cleaning out our Mt. Baldy home right after I married John that I threw out his childhood Red Riding Hood glass -I went out and found him a Bugs Bunny glass, but that didn't do it ... that Red Riding Hood glass was an antique!

Eventually, Dawn began to appreciate her husband's love of good wood, collector's pieces (especially in the dental field) and choice fur-

Recently, the couple completed refurbishing the dental office with antiques from oak church pews and an ancient oak telephone booth in the waiting room to Victorian dental and glass. As time passed, she absorbed the antique craze - the chrome and glass was moved out. Little by little the remnants of blue and silver were replaced with woods and hues of nature's colors.

They found a massive, carved mahogany dining room set in a beach antique shop. "It's supposed to have come from Poughkeepsie (N.Y.)," Dawn said. It looks as if it came out of a Black Forest castle in Germany. There are 16 high-backed chairs, sideboard, china cabinet and serving table.

So the set would stand out, Entner tore up the rug and laid a dark wood

The living room is a potpourri of different pieces collected far and wide. The effect is one of family comfort - a place to curl up and read, look at the expansive view through the glass wall or play checkers at the game table.

Little by little, the entire house is being converted

Slowly, the bedrooms are being furnished with antiques. The Entners' daughter, Staci, has a bed

Their antique collecting hobby has spilled over to their hilltop home. Those of you who have lived in the West End over a Christmas have seen the huge lighted star on the hillside looking straight up Euclid Avenue. This attached to John and Dawn Entner's home.

Back down in the valley at his dental office, Entner is justly proud of two old dental equipment cabinets. Both have innumerable little drawers and cubby holes and are of fine wood. Over one, Entner has a brass gas light hooked up to burn gas - this is his "pride and joy."

chairs daily - one during consultations, and the other when Xrays are being taken, Both date to the late 1800s.

"Jeanne and Mark Shipley (of the Gallery Theater, Ontario) got us going to auctions," Dawn said. "We find it's more fun than antique shops.'

From their antique shop explorations, auctions and a threeweek antique-hunting tour of England recently, the Entners have collected an endless number of antiques - furniture, china, crystal and bric-a-brac.

Asked where they keep all the things not being used, Dawn Entner said with a giggle, "Oh, we opened an antique shop in La Verne.

Student housing needed

More than 1,000 Cal Poly Pomona students who have applied for space in the Cal Poly residence halls cannot be accommodated, according to Ruth Coopersmith, director of housing. Because of the shortage of space for incoming students, the housing office is appealing to faculty and staff members and local residents for rooms or apartments for rent to students.

According to Coopersmith, on campus re housing provides space for 1184 persons and all these spaces are filled. As of today, more than 1,000 students over the 1,184 have applied for on campus housing.

We are desperately in need of housing - rooms in private homes, apartments and other alternative living facilities to the campus residence halls, says Coopersmith.

CPR class planned

Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation classes (CPR) will be held free of charge to the public at Foothill Presbyterian Hospital, Glendora, on Sept. 11, Oct. 14 and Nov. 12, from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Instructors for the classes, which are certified, will be either Donna Fickey, R.M., or Annette Whistler, R.N., B.S.N., outpatient and inpatient coordinators, respectively. All sessions will be held in the FPH doctors' dining room in cooperation with the American Heart Association. Call AHA at 331-3436 for reservations.

Each four-hour session will include instruction dealing with basic CPR, a lecture on coronary heart disease, demonstrations, and manikin practice simulating actual heart emergency conditions.

Participants successfully completing a "Heart Saver" course will receive AHA certification in CPR, and will learn techniques that may enable them to save the life of a heart attack victim during the early critical moments before professional help arrives. Instruction in CPR is only one of the services offered by the hospital's cardiac treatment center. Primary activities are cardiac rehabilitation through a supervised exercise therapy program which begins while a heart attack or heart surgery patient is recovering in the hospital, and continues by doctor's prescription after he or she is discharged. This wandering jew is called the Tahitian bridal veil, and the rambling plant is adaptable to many house situations but prefers light.

Tahitian bridal veils do well in the house

Tahitian bridal veil or just bridal veil, inch plant or fernleaf wandering jew are names used for the same plant which came to us by way of Jamaica. This attractive houseplant is a natural for hanging baskets, cascading from a bookshelf or window sill or placed on its very own pedestal. Its delicate rambling stems are adorned with small (1-2") leaves which are a dark green on top and purple underneath. Its most common name, bridal veil, has to have come from the fact that it blooms with tiny, white flowers that stand out against the dark green leaves and somewhat resemble baby's breath.

It is unique, gay and adaptable says the Living Plant Growers Association who have named it their Plant of the Month for August. This plant prefers a strong light but not a hot, direct one. Ideally a dash of dappled sunlight part of the day is best along with some misting to keep the humidity up. Bridal veil requires average watering making sure it is planted in a well draining soil. And don't let it sit in water as no plant appreciates wet feet.

Taken care of properly, bridal veil can trail up to a yard or more. If you feel it needs renovating, cut it back but don't throw away all the clippings. Take the good stem pieces with a node or two present and room them in water to have more plants.

Other plants belonging to the same family as bridal veil are the Zebrina pendula that has purplish green leaves with small custers of purplish rose and white flowers and the Tradescantia fluminensis which is a fast growing houseplant with succulent like stems on which dark green or green with yellow or white striped leaves are attached. All are perfectly suited for hanging baskets.

Prices dropping

Halibut supply is increasing appreciated from Maine to California for its firm, flavorful white flesh. These very large fish are caught in the cold, clear waters off Alaska and British Columbia and are sold fresh in season in California, frozen offseason and out of the area. Major new production, according to the California Seafood Institute, began this month and will continue until the quota is taken. With increasing shipments arriving daily, local markets will be dropping the price on this tasty fish.

"Halibut," says Thomas Elliott, Board Chairman of CSI, "is high in protein, low in fat and sodium content and any fat that is present is high in polyunsaturates. It's a member of the flounder family and, as such, halibut recipes are interchangeable with those for sanddab, turbot or flounder.'

Although steaks and fillets are extremely popular, the most economical way to buy halibut is in roasts or chunks. These three-to-five pound pieces may be baked, poached or cut into bite-sized pieces for barbecuing.

Halibut in Vegetable Wine Sauce

2 lb. halibut steaks, fresh or frozen

1/2 tsp. salt 1 tbl. chopped parsley

1 clove garlic, crushed

1 carrot, grated 1 lg. tomato, chopped 3/4 cup dry white wine

1/4 cup flour

Dash white pepper 1/4 cup olive oil

1 lg. onion, chopped

2 stalks celery, chopped

1/4 cup water Defrost halibut in refrigerator, if frozen. Combine flour, salt, pepper and chopped parsley. Dredge fish in flour mixture to seal in moisture. Heat olive oil in skillet and add fish, frying until golden brown on both sides. Remove from skillet. Add garlic, onion, carrot and celery to skillet. Saute 10 to 15 minutes, until tender. Add tomato and water, simmering for 10 minutes more. Puree sauce in blender and stir in wine. Return sauce to skillet. Place steaks in sauce. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes longer. Makes four to six servings.

Halibut Chowder

1 lb. halibut 1 medium onion, chopped

1 clove garlic, minced 2 cups water

½ cup sliced celery 1/8 tsp. pepper

4 slices bacon, diced 1/4 cup chopped green pepper

½ bay leaf, crushed

1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) whole tomatoes 2 cyos duced oitaties

11/2 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. thyme Cut fish into 11/2" pieces. Fry bacon until partially cooked. Add onion, green pepper and garlic. Saute until transparent. Add tomatoes, water, potatoes, celery and seasonings. Cover and simmer about 20 minutes. Add fish and simmer 10 minutes more, or until fish is tender. Makes six servings.

Halibut Sandwich Spread

2 cups poached flaked halibut

2 tsp. minced onion

3 tbl. pickle relish ½ tsp. salt

1 tsp. prepared mustard 2 tbl. lemon juice

1/2 cup finely chopped celery 1 tsp. Worchestershire sauce

4 dashes Tahasco

One of the most irresponsible myths associated with sugar is that it provides nothing but "empty calories," the president of The Sugar Association says.

"There is no such thing as an empty calorie," 'J.W. Tatem Jr. said in a recent issue of Sugar and Health, the Association newsletter. "This is a nonscientific term that totally disregards sugar's main contribution to the diet: it makes food taste better.'

A calorie is simply a measure of heat and energy, Tatem pointed out. Everyone requires a certain number of calories, or fuel, of the body each day, which can come from a variety of sources.

Dr. Fergus Clydesdale of University of Massachusetts, a professor in the Department of Food and Nutrition, has said that when a person eats foods that supply the daily requirements of carbohydrates, proteins, witamins and minerals, the rest of the calorie quota can be filled from any food, Tatem said.

"Critics of sugar frequently misuse figures pertaining to the sugar content of foods, and in the process misinform consumers, Tatem added.

As an example, he cited condiments, which by their nature are supposed to be used sparingly to highlight the taste of foods.

"While a 15- or 20-percent sugar content may be quoted for a salad dressing, after a tablespoon of it is added to a bowl of greens, tomatoes, celery and cucumbers, the sugar content of a serving of that salad with dressing becomes tiny," he said. 'And how many people are likely to eat a salad without that little bit of dressing that makes it taste better? he asked.

.He said the same concept applies to the 10 calories or so in the ketchup you dab on a hamburger or the small percent of sugar in an entire chicken that has been coated with barbecue

"Sugar is nature's way of enticing us to better eating," Tatem said. "Most of us pay little attention to the basics of nutrition and simply select foods that taste good. Sugar encourages a balanced intake of a variety of nutrients by making many different and necessary foods taste better. And if the taste of a food doesn't appeal to us, we won't eat it, and therefore we can't benefit from whatever nutrients it has to offer."

He said studies conducted by Dr. Morley B. Kare, professor of physiology and director of the Monell Chemical Senses Center at the University of Pennsylvania, have shown that even a newborn infant has a desire for sweet tastes. In certain cases, whether or not one enjoys the taste of a food can even affect how well the body uses the food.

The point is that sugar is rarely eaten alone, Tatem explained. It is used primarily because it makes food taste better. And good nutrition begins with Attractive covered pan 6 to 8 minutes, zucchini boats are filled until tender-crisp. Chop with a mixture of ricotta, zucchini centers; combine ham, and green pepper. It's with cheese, ham, pepper, an ideal way to use an abunegg, and 2 teaspoons of the dance of zucchini, which often overwhelms home Arrange zucchini shells in gardeners, plus any leftover ham.

For added appeal, top the zucchini with an Italianstyle tomato sauce. Tomato J juice seasoned with an envelope of spaghetti sauce mix is the secret to the slimming sauce with an oldfashiomed flavor.

Serve with a fresh fruit vings. salad and skim milk for a nutritious lunch or supper. It's a great way to diet and enjoy it, too. An equally tempting recipe is 10-Karat Carrots. This meatless casserole is tasty, filling, and high in vitannin A. Cheddar cheese and eggs add protein to a combination of shredded carrots and rice, while prepared yellow mustard and nutmeg provide subtle flavor accents. Ten-Karat Carrots can be served instead of a vegetable and potato or as a main dish for lunch, accompanied by a crisp green salad.

Both recipes will help you add variety to meals while you try to whittle away the calories.

Beef on a budget

Stir fry beef with egetables is a popular way to use leftovers from budget cuts. Slice cooked beef across the grain into thin strips to equal 1 cup. Diagonally slice one stalk celery, 1 stalk broccoli and 2 green onions into strips; slice 1/2 green pepper and 1 thin slice fresh ginger into narrow lengthwise strips. In 1 tablespoon oil in skillet, saute beef and vegetables, stirring, until vegetables are crisp-tender. Stir in 1 tablespoon each soy sauce and water mixed with 1 teaspoon cornstarch; cook, stirring, until thickened. Makes 2 servings.

Marinades offer a flavorful way to tenderize ess expensive cuts of beef. When making a marinade, three kinds of ingredients are usually combined. First is fat, usually salad oil or olive oil. Second, a marinade needs a food acid, the ingredient that actually helps to enderize. These are often wine, vinegar or lemon juice. Third, seasonings are added to enhance, but not mask, the herbs, spices or prepared sauces.

Pot roast in a package is a snap. Place 3 lb. chuck roast of California beef on large sheet of heavy-duty aluminum foil in shallow roasting pan. Sprinkle with 1 envelope dehydrated onion soup mix and pour over 1/2 cup dry red wine. Wrap foil tightly around roast, folding ends twice to seal. Roast in 325 degree F. oven 31/2 to 4 2 tablespoons prepared hours. To serve, slice beef across grain and serve with pan juices.

> If you cook for a small household, there is no need to shun the larger budget priced beef cuts. A 3 or 4 pound beef chuck or round roast may be divided and part of it frozen for more delicious beef menus at a later date. Cut one portion for a small pot roast; slice another for Swiss steak; cut another portion into cubes for stew

Summer menus often have to conform to busy schedules. Entrees, such as this one, that can look good and taste great after hours in the refrigerator are handy to have. This is pasta and chicken with onions and cherry tomatoes topped

Summer menu for busy people

A prime requisite for summer menus is adaptibility. Meals usually have to conform to a myriad of activities; little league schedules, golf games, tennis dates or softball games, and frequently when we eat is as important as what we eat.

The dinner hour can start at 5 for the early birds and end with hot and weary stragglers at 8.

Planning meals around these activities can be difficult. You know what's needed; substantial, nutritious main dishes that can be prepared ahead and still look good and taste great after hours in the refrigerator.

But creating such a dish can be another story. When you do come across an interesting recipe that can do all these things, it's worth talking about.

This cold salad recipe offers a delicious solution to the problem. It features an old favorite, spaghetti, mixed with garden fresh vegetables. The spaghetti is cooked early in the day then tossed with herb and garlic salad dressing and chilled for severl hours allowing the pasta to absorb flavor from the dressing.

Diced, cooked chicken moistened with a little mayonnaise is mixed with the chilled spaghetti, then slic-ed vegetables (cherry tomatoes, onions, mushrooms and green peppers) are added. Croutons add a delightfully crisp texture and a delicious cheese and garlic flavor to the spaghetti and vegetables.

Served with a tossed green salad and hot buttered rolls, this menu is a handy stand-by for busy people.

Rep. Lloyd flies new fighter

Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th District, became the first Congressman to fly the Navy's newest jet fighter / attack aircraft, the F-18 Hornet.

Operating from the NAS Patuxent River, Maryland flight test center, Lloyd, a former Navy pilot, flew the F-18 through its full range of operational maneuvers. The Hornet, produced by McDonnell Douglas in St. Louis, Mo. and the Northrop Corporation in Hawthorne, is nearing the end of its test cycle. The fighter version has completed 85-90 percent of its planned tests and the attack model 70-75 percent.

'Each time I fly a new military aircraft, I continue to be amazed at the strides technology is making in aviation and weapon systems," Lloyd said. "The F-18 handles beautifully in all speed ranges, and I'm particularly impressed with the engine performance." The F-18 is powered by two General Electric F404 fan-jet engines. The Hornet will be one of the world's finest fighter / attack aircraft when it gets to the fleet, and I envy the Navy and Marine Corps pilots who will fly it," Lloyd

The Navy asked for $1.6 billion for procurement of 48 F-18's in the FY 1981 defense budget, but the House Armed Services Committee, on which Lloyd serves, authorized an additional $461 million to increase production to 72 aircraft. The Senate authorized funds for 60 aircraft.

'The House and Senate are meeting in conference at this time to reach a compromise on the number of F-18's that will be authorized in FY 1981," Lloyd said. "Whatever the final number turns out to be, I hope it provides for an efficient aircraft production rate.

Other schools represented in the photography contest were Citrus, Mt. San Antonio College and Riverside City

Attendance at college up

A 12 percent increase in (ADA) was reported on the Chaffey College annual attendance for the 1979-80 school year over the previous year.

This percentage could increase even more when all the noncredit enrollment is reported, Steve Wallace, director of educational marketing, said.

"These gains exceed our initial projections by a substantial margin. We are elated with the response to our programs," Wallace

Enrollment for the fall 1980 quarter is expected to be approximately 12,000 students, up from 10,000 for fall 1979.

All of Chaffey's tuition free 115 vocational and academic programs are still open for registration. Anyone 18 years of age or older or a high school graduate is eligible to attend Chaffey College. Also, students in a high school program can attend Chaffey with special permission from their counselors.
